

British Sociological Association
Philip Abrams Memorial Prize
Joint Winner 2009

Jaqui Gabb

Researching Intimacy in Families

Researching Intimacy in Families introduces and invigorates understandings of intimacy and family relationships through an incisive engagement with the sociology of intimacy and interpersonal relationships in contemporary Western society and the methods used to research families, children and personal life. Using original data, the book opens out the theoretical debate on intimacy and illustrates the potential of qualitative mixed-methods in capturing the richness and complexity of family life. Jacqui Gabb brings methodology teaching to life through extensive illustrations of methods in the context of families and childhood research, including innovatory methods and approaches designed and piloted by the author.

This book is an invaluable research resource for scholars and students in the fields of intimacy and sexuality, families, children and relationships research, and more widely to those in sociology, gender studies and qualitative research methods. It covers an extensive range of scholarship from Europe, America and Australia.

JACQUI GABB is Lecturer in Sociology, Faculty of Social Sciences, The Open University, UK.

Palgrave Macmillan ~ 978-0-230-52722-5